

Project Management in Global Health

29 June to 20 September 2020

Ann Downer, EdD, MS

12 weeks, 6-9 hours per week

About the Course

So much of your work in global health is project based, whether you're training healthcare workers implementing an intervention, adopting a health information system or evaluating for quality improvement. Good project management is crucial for the success of these endeavors.

By the end of the Project Management in Global Health course, you'll learn the fundamentals of project management, including conducting needs assessments, creating planning and implementation documents, managing project resources, transitioning the project to local agencies, and evaluating the project.

Unfortunately, projects don't always go as planned. Funding may be cut, the scope may grow, priorities may shift, key team members may leave, or a host of other unexpected changes. This course gives practical tips, tools, and techniques for how to address unexpected challenges that inevitably arise. These come from experts from all over the world who have spent years managing global health projects and share lessons they've learned.

Format

This online, graduate-level course has video lectures, case studies, readings, discussion forums, quizzes, and practical assignments.

You can participate in this course as an independent participant or as part of a site with five or more people. We encourage participation as a group because it provides a forum for discussing course concepts and applying them to the local setting and customs. If you can't join a group, the discussion boards can provide that forum. The course is taught in English.

More Information

Visit <https://edgh.washington.edu/courses/project-management>

Eligibility

The course is most useful for public health and healthcare professionals who have some experience in management and who wish to enhance their skills working with people and organizational resources. The course is less well suited to individuals in entry-level positions.

Fees

Local sites: $1500 (5-60 participants)

Independent participants:
$299 (mailed certificate) or
$199 (digital certificate)